

MANAGING THE HOLIDAYS

(2021 EDITION)

Even though some things are definitely better than last year we still have to think differently about holiday celebrations. Here are some ideas that may help with managing holidays between now and the New Year:

Take a Breath

With or without a mask, holidays can leave you breathless... Do the 4/7/8 breath (count 4 inhale, hold for a count of 7, exhale for 8). Research has shown it will help you more than you would expect – to better sleep, decreased anxiety, and a pause that can help you increase your overall resiliency.

Lower your Expectations

The fantasy of holidays often does not match the reality. Find the real stuff and let the expectation of perfection dissolve in a deep breath. Just do your best. Things are different than they were a couple of years ago. Adjust to the differences and find new ways to enjoy the few days that are the “holi-days.” The holidays pass quickly and on the other side, you want to feel joy, not anxiety.

Old Fashioned Stuff

Find non-commercial ways to play and enjoy. Turn on music, watch old movies, play board games, go for walks, cut out snowflakes, make homemade gifts, have a holiday picnic on a blanket in your living room. Get creative.

Don't Make Resolutions

Avoid resolutions this year. Because we really don't know what next year will be about with the ongoing concerns of a Global Pandemic. If you have to resolve something, resolve that you will keep as healthy, kind, calm, and safe as possible. That might be good enough this year. Your EAP website does have an online 30-day challenge if you MUST make resolutions. Be kind to yourself.

Balance Joy and Grief

For some this holiday will be about all the losses of the last couple of years. Take your time to feel your feelings and take your time to grieve. There is no schedule on grief. But you can allow yourself permission to let a few bits of sunlight in even in the darkest of days. That will allow you to heal over time, bit by bit, one day at a time. Call your EAP for compassionate support any time.

Connect with Others

Use Zoom, or FaceTime, or the telephone, or email, or instant chat, or other platforms to create online meetings with those you cannot see in person. One of the most amazing things that has come out of the pandemic is the ability to connect to people globally. Make it work for yourself.

Go to your EAP Website

There are tons of resources, information, and support on the website. If you sign up for 52 Weeks of Well-being, you will get a reminder every week for the next year of ways to increase your resiliency. It's free. It's easy. It simply arrives in your email if you Sign Up.

Call your EAP

This is a great time to ask for support, especially if you haven't before. EAP is a good place to just talk story, or get suggestions for new and easy, safe and gentle ways to celebrate the holidays. If you find yourself not able to deal with the holidays, if you get too depressed, blue, sad, or lost in the process, or begin increasing drugs or alcohol, or having problems with relationships, or feel worse...call (808) 597-8222. You are not alone.
